Do patients and visitors pay for communication assistance or accommodations?

No. The facility or health care provider gives communication assistance free of charge.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

When do I ask for communication assistance or an accommodation?

If you require help, ask when scheduling hospital stays or appointments (as well as follow-up appointments):

- Hospital Admissions
 - If your hospital visit begins in the emergency department, ask for help when you come to the hospital.
 - If your hospital visit is scheduled, tell the admissions staff (ex: the scheduler or receptionist) and your health care provider ahead of your stay or visit.
 - If you are in the hospital, ask your nurse. If they cannot help you, contact Patient Relations.
- Surgical Scheduling
 - Tell your surgeon and the surgery scheduler.
- Office Visits
 - Tell the scheduler or receptionist and your health care provider
 - Check with your health care team a few days before your appointment to make sure any needed accommodations have been arranged.
- If you are scheduling a visit or stay at a UPMC hospital, you can call the Disabilities Resource Center to learn more about taking part in the Let Us Help You (LUHU) program. Through this patient care coordination program, the Center will work with you and the hospital to pre-schedule communication assistance and accommodations ahead of your stay or visit. Call the Center at 412-605-1483 for more information.

What else can I do to make sure I get the help that I need?

Tell the staff right away if you feel that your communication needs are not being met, and ask for other help.

- MyUPMC
 - MyUPMC is an electronic portal to help you communicate with your doctor's office and access your medical records through your computer or tablet. Visit MyUPMC at: www.myupmc.com.

Who do I ask or go to if I have questions or concerns?

- Ask a person on your health care team, such as the:
 - Nurse or unit director
 - Social worker
 - Case manager
 - Your doctor
 - Other health care providers based on your health issue
 - Patient Relations Department
 - The Disabilities Resource Center at 412-605-1483 or disabilitiesresource@upmc.edu
